

Letter of Sir Oliver Lodge to Helen Temple Cooke, Feb. 7, 1920

Letterhead: "218 Commonwealth Avenue"

My dear Miss Cooke

It has been sad not to see you again. We have often thought of you and yours being [distant?] at Wellesley where you gave us such an excellent time.

Mrs. Reed has been kindness itself & we are sorry to go, but I hope that some time in March [is?] my return to Boston and then perhaps your Wellesley pupils will be able to come out of quarantine and hear lectures on the atom and the Ether of Space.

In that case we shall be seeing you again.

We have met wonderful friends of yours, Mrs. Hamilton Osgood especially, but others also & in spite of the snow have had a good [trip] and [restorative?] visit.

The [ ] with the [ball?] was only [half] full.

I trust you are now getting rapidly better. It's a good thing that you didn't try to come out in this weather.

Yours most truly,

Oliver Lodge
